

The creation of the Women Of Africa Website

I want to express profound gratitude to SRV Web Solutions on behalf of African women worldwide and myself for the exceptional services that we have received in the creation of this website www.womenofafrika.org

There is no doubt that the Most High God endowed every human being with special skills and qualities to enable us contribute to his Divine plan in a world changing at such great pace. In an age of such rapid growth in Information technology, people like Alice Ukoko are totally excluded from applying these sophisticated skills.

I am not computer literate and certainly have no idea about websites many people have offered to support Women Of Africa to conjure its vision to itself and the world at large using developing technologies. I spent sleepless nights worrying about my ability to convey our message so vital to changing Africa and our world.

I hear of twitters, Facebook; Myspace; YouTube and the growing names with horror.

I overcome my frustration with the fact that I am only one human being I do not need to know everything. True, but how those that solve the problem of my failure to tell the world about what the Vision and Mission of Women Of Africa is about?

Then my personal friend, that great son of Africa Ayo Johnson during one of my many discussions with him mentioned that one day, he encountered SRV Web Solutions who had sent an unsolicited advert for website designing to his email address.

Ayo Johnson told me how he decided to call these website design experts up though based in India. Ayo himself has been having problem finding a website designer who would design his own website. He was amazed and said that the price was good and that I too can use the service.

That was how I met the greatest professional website designers I never knew existed anywhere in the world.

They take pride in their work and most of all they are interested in whether the website created represent the vision, mission and how Women Of Africa is perceived when visiting the site.

I was concerned about the spiritual aspect of the website as much as the message that it contains. I was not afraid to say what features I feel that the website must have.

The Women Of Africa website represents everything that my life mission entails this far in my journey. It is my sincere hope that every visitor to this website is blessed by the information and the blessing that spirit transmits through.

Thank you Sam and your team for your patience, your command of your skills and your generosity in applying your expertise to creating Women Of Africa through this website. I was amazed at how you were able to control my laptop in London from India when I could not understand your technical commands.

AMAZING!!!

Your interpersonal skills are second to none!!

Thank you for your sleepless nights working with me to get this website ready for the formal launch. I wondered if you ever left the computer as you are every present in India to take my endless and ever changing content. Thank you for your understanding when I could not meet with you on Skype due to the wear and tear of my aging body although you and your team had waited for that meeting.

DEDICATION:

I want to dedicate this website to every African woman in Africa and in the Diaspora and to you SRV Web Solutions for creating everything I have ever wanted to communicate to the world through the World Wide Web.

THANK YOU INDIA!!
